The most well-known Russian monument devoted to the WWII is, <sup>gr</sup> I think, the Eternal flame. Every Russian citizen has seen the Eternal flame at least once. Now I'll tell you about it.

You can find the Eternal flame in almost every Russian city. It looks like an iron, star-shaped bonfire and as the name states, it will burn on forever. This monument is a memorial to all citizens who died fighting in a World War II. As long as the flame keeps burning on, the sacrifices <sup>gr</sup> will never be forgotten.

Once you are in <sup>in</sup> a Russian city, you should visit the Eternal flame. It will honor all ~~the~~ those who died protecting the country and it will tell <sup>ex</sup> you something about the horrible tragedy of WWII.
